LECTURER

TEACH NORTH TEXAS
(JOINT PROGRAM OF THE COLLEGE OF ARTS AND SCIENCES AND COLLEGE OF EDUCATION)

The Teach North Texas program at the University of North Texas (UNT) invites applications for a full time, 9-month lecturer position to serve as a Master Teacher. The position begins in Fall 2015. Annual reappointment is possible based on satisfactory performance. Applications are accepted on-line at https://facultyjobs.unt.edu.

Teach North Texas is an undergraduate secondary mathematics, science, and computer science teacher education program being implemented at UNT as one of 34 national UTeach replication sites. Experienced secondary teachers work with UNT faculty in design and delivery of an innovative, highly visible program.

Applicants must have a minimum of a master's degree at the time of appointment with significant content in mathematics, mathematics education, science, and/or science education and at least three years of secondary public school teaching experience. The successful candidate will have demonstrated excellence in teaching and interest in teacher education.

Desired qualifications include supervision of student teaching, experience as an instructional coach, and/or college teaching experience. Duties of Master Teachers include teaching courses in the professional development sequence for pre-service teachers in mathematics, science and computer science; coordination of field and clinical experiences to include orientation of mentor teachers and supervision of TNT students in the field, and building community among TNT students, faculty, and school personnel.

Questions about this position may be addressed to Dr. John Quintanilla, Co-Director, at John.Quintanilla@unt.edu.
